The I. & C. Car, With its Human Freight, Flew
Through the Air

ACCIDENT ON TEST RUN

Miraculous Escape From Death of the Three Men Aboard—
Fell in the Canal

It was little short of miraculous that someone was not instantly killed in an accident on the I. & C. traction line Sunday morning.

A test of four new motors—not a speed test—was being made on one of their cars and the run to Connersville was elected for the test. As the car sped down the west hill going into Connersville, in some inexplicable manner, Motorman Crawford lost control of it; at the bottom of the steep incline is a short curve and the three men aboard the car realized that an accident was inevitable unless the speed could be checked.

Frank Weston, an employee of the carshops here, who was out on the initial trip, jumped off as the car fairly flew down the hill, and sustained a broken arm and a slight wound on the head.

Motorman Crawford stuck to his post, and Clarence Gray, of Griffin, another car shop employee, remained on the car.

It is merely a matter of conjecture, as to what really did happen when the car left the track at the curve, where two rails were torn out, but it is the opinion of the traction employees that it turned somersault. At any rate the car bed left the trucks and fell in the middle of the canal, at least twenty-five feet distance. No evidence was found where it touched the ground between the track and canal bank, hence the somersault theory.

It hardly seems creditable that the two men who remained in the car escaped with but few scratches. Suffice to say there was some scrambling by the two men inside the car, which was turned upside down and half submerged under the water. They climbed out a window on top of the wrecked car, and remained there until a "gang plank" was put out to them by men who rushed to the scene.

It is said that water splashed out of the canal and fell for a half block around the scene of the accident.

FEAST IN WILDERNESS" WAS ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Social Was Held at Second M. E.
Church for the Benefit of Their Popular Pastor

The "Feast in the Wilderness," given on the Second M. E. church lawn, under a large canvas Saturday night was a most profitable event.

The "feast" was given for the benefit of their popular pastor, Rev. T. T. Carpenter, who holds a warm place in the hearts of his congregation, because of his ardent spirit in the church work over which he has charge.

GRANDMOTHER, AGED 100, REMEMBERS RELATIVE

Mrs. Dora Pickard, of Cherry Grove, received a surprise box from her grandmother in Hartsville, Indiana with many articles valued at over one hundred dollars. In addition, she received a handsome sum of money in a money order. Her grandmother who is almost one hundred years of age, is breaking up housekeeping, and will live with one of her sons in the future.

FORMER RESIDENT DIED IN LOUISVILLE KENTUCKY

Remains of Jesse R. Griffin Will be Brought Here For Burial

Jesse R. Griffin, until about eight years ago a resident of this city, died last night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Megee, in Louisville, Ky. He leaves besides his daughter, a son, Bert Griffin, of Indianapolis, and formerly of this city.

The remains will be brought here tomorrow morning on the Big Four railroad, and burial will occur at East Hill cemetery.

Mr. Griffin was well and favorably known throughout Rush county.

C. H. & D. TRAIN HITS FRAIL STREET CAR

One Woman Killed and Five Injured—Rushville Man Conductor on Train

The C. H. & D. westbound passenger train due here at 5:52 each evening struck a street car coming out of Cincinnati yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, killing one woman instantly and injuring a score of other passengers on the ill fated street car.

The car, in which were the unfortunate people, was dashed from the tracks and crushed like an eggshell 35 feet from where it was hit and landed against the railroad station.

Bert Talbott, formerly of Rushville, was the conductor of the train and John Spencer the engineer. None of the railroad men would talk of the accident. A confusion of signals was the cause of the accident.

BALLOONS DUE HERE TONIGHT

Many Residents Will Arise
From Their Warm Couches to See Racers

ALARM WILL BE GIVEN
Rush County is on the "Air Line" of the International Prize
Contestants

Well, tonight is balloon night. The chances are even that one or more of the dirigible monsters of the air will pass over this city, on their flight from St. Louis to the Atlantic coast, for Rush county is on the air "line."

The fire bell will be rung tonight if the balloons are sighted, and it behooves us to sleep with our pants in our boots, like a fireman, if we would arrange a hasty toilet and repair out of doors.

Nineteen starters left St. Louis on the scheduled hour, and with fairly good success and an ordinary breeze the balloons will pass here between three and eight o'clock in the morning.

On a test trip, made last week one of the balloons lighted about twenty miles from Rushville in Shelby county.

PRICE-BARRETT CASE WAS CONTINUED TODAY

The Price-Barrett case, which was venued to the Decatur circuit court, was continued today on account of the illness of Mrs. James Barrett, one of the principal witnesses.

SUNDAY WAS "PRUITT DAY"

Husky Ball Twirler Was Received With "Loud Acclaim" by Friends

PITCHED AGAINST REDS

The Former Rushville Boy Made a Good Showing Under the Circumstances

Sunday was Pruitt Day in Connersville. The husky twirler who studied the A. B. C.'s of base ball in Rushville and who made good with the Boston Americans this season, was the man of the hour.

Like John T. McCutcheon writes of George Ade leaving home in the November number of the Appleton magazine of whom he says: "In the heart of every young boy is the dream that he may go away and make his future, then return in a carriage drawn by white horses and be greeted with admiring acclaim by his town-folks." Charley Pruitt saw the fulfillment of just such a dream.

Over four hundred Rushville fans journeyed to Connersville yesterday to cheer an old friend and favorite to victory. Pruitt was pitted against the Cincinnati Nationals and with the amateur bunch behind him, made a very creditable showing, the game ending in a score of 6 to 5, favoring the Cincinnati Reds. Pruitt did not use anything but a straight ball, but he put the high gear speed on nearly everyone he pegged to the receiver.

After the game Sunday evening he returned to Rushville for a visit. He says he will hunt rabbits in the wilds around Osgood this winter, for he wants to be the pink man in the spring time.

One year in Boston has wrought changes wonderful for the one Charles Pruitt. He has evidently lost his slight clumsiness he was affected with in pacing the crooked streets of the Hub City, for in yesterday's game every move was a picture, and he was as graceful as a dancing master.

OFFERS REWARD FOR A CONVICTION

Percy Walker Will Pay $100 For Conviction of Dog
Thief

Yesterday afternoon between five and six o'clock, some unknown party drove up the Jersey Isle Stock farm, west of this city, and stole one of the ten weeks old Scotch collies owned by A. P. Walker.

Mr. Walker is "dog-gone" sore over the bold act of the theft and today offered one hundred dollars for the name and conviction of the guilty party.

Facetious Testators.
Will making often affords a man an unrivaled opportunity of paying off old scores and speaking his mind without any fear of unpleasant consequences to himself.

The great Duke of Marlborough evidently could not resist the temptation of a farewell slap at his duchess when he left her "£10,000 wherewith to spoil Blenheim in her own way and £15,000 to keep clean and go to law with."

There is also a distinct note of spitefulness in this extract from the testament of a Mr. Kerr who, after declaring that he would probably have left his widow £10,000 if she had allowed him to read his evening paper in peace, adds: "But you must remember, my dear, that whenever I commenced reading you started playing and singing. You must therefore take the consequences. I leave you £1,000."—Grand Magazine.

Mosquitoes prefer negroes to white men. They will sting a black dog in preference to a light colored one. They like a dark resting place.

LOCAL MILKMEN TO RAISE PRICE

Price of Milk Will be Trebled—
State Organization is Effectuated

A. P. WALKER IS PRESIDENT

Over One Hundred Gallons of Milk Shipped Out of Rush
County Every Day

It's not just exactly a trust, merely a combination to raise the price of milk; that was the object of the meeting of over two hundred dairymen in Indianapolis last Saturday, when A. P. Walker, owner of the Jersey Isle Stock farm, west of this city, was elected president.

In raising the wholesale price it does not necessarily follow that the consumer will have to pay more; they have been paying an extravagant figure for some time, and it has been the retailers who have profited thereby. Now comes Mr. Dairyman, who wants some of the "cream" of the profits.

For several years the Indianapolis retailers have been buying milk of the dairymen throughout the State for thirteen cents per gallon, and realizing from forty to fifty cents a gallon for it. It has come to such a pass, in view of the increased price of feed, that the milkmen can make but a small profit in their business at this figure. A few years ago bran cost but eight dollars a ton, now it is twenty-eight dollars; hay could be purchased for from three to seven dollars a ton, now it costs from twenty-five to thirty dollars; oats were twenty cents, now they are fifty cents and corn sold for forty cents, now it is sixty cents. The price of labor too has advanced, and dairymen claim that the cost of securing milk now is three times more than it was four or five years ago. And they will raise their price accordingly. The increase in price, while not a very modest one at a first glance, they declare it to be reasonable. They will raise the price of milk from thirteen cents to thirty cents a gallon, and the price of cream from thirty cents to one dollar per gallon.

The enactment of the Pure Food laws, which specifies that under no circumstances can milk be adulterated, has some influence on raising the price of milk.

Next Saturday another meeting will be held in Indianapolis and Amos Blackledge, of this city, will read a paper on "Effecting an Organization."

The local division of the I. & C. traction company carries about 3300 gallons of milk and cream to Indianapolis daily and 100 gallons of this is shipped by Rush county dairymen.

COWBOYS WILL BE IN CARTHAGE SOON

Popular Evangelists Will Hold
Series of Holiness Meetings at that Place

A series of holiness meetings will begin at the Wesleyan church in Carthage on next Thursday, conducted by C. P. and E. G. Roberts, and B. A. Moores, evangelists of Texas, popularly known as the Cowboy preachers, and a host of other workers are expected to be present.

The Roberts brothers were formerly cowboys on the Texas plains. Both are widely known as enthusiastic evangelists, and they attract great attention wherever they hold meetings.

The meetings will continue for ten days and will be held both morning and evening on each day.

CONSULTED REGARDING ARLINGTON BANK CASE

Goodrich Case Will Not Come up at Present Term of Court

Charley Hack, of Shelbyville, prosecuting attorney for the Shelby-Rush circuit, was here Saturday evening, says the Greensburg News, consulting attorneys with reference to the trial of Horace Goodrich, the Arlington, Rush county, banker, whose trial was venued to this county. The case will not be tried at the present term of court.

WATSON TO SPEAK AT BIG BANQUET

Will be One of the Principal Speakers Before Marquette Club

The Cincinnati Enquirer says: "Congressman James E. Watson has accepted an invitation to be the guest of honor at a banquet given by the Marquette club of Chicago the later part of October. The club, which is a leading Republican organization in Chicago, extended an unusual compliment to him, as he was the principal speaker at the annual banquet last year."

"Watson is arranging to leave for Washington the first of December. He will leave his race in the hands of Captain Gowdy and other friends."

RUSHVILLE GIRL WINS AS MOST POPULAR LADY

At the pie social given at the Butler school house in Richland township, Saturday evening, it was left for one of our own Rushville girls to win a handsome cake, because she was voted the most popular lady at the social.

Miss Martha Morgan, who makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Kiplinger, in this city, was the lucky girl. Miss Morgan formerly lived in Richland township, and on visiting her old home found that she still held a place in the hearts of her friends. She was accompanied by her sisters, Misses Wilna and Nellie Morgan, and Lizzie Bishop.

SEVEN ADDITIONS AT LITTLE FLATROCK CHURCH

The revival services at the Little Flatrock Christian church are growing in interest and numbers each night. Rev. Milo J. Smith, of Spencer, Ind., will assist his brother, Rev. Roscoe Smith, the pastor, with the meetings this week.

There have been seven additions to date. Five were added to the church Sunday. The meetings will continue over next Sunday.

—Shelbyville Liberal: Mrs. E. L. Platt, of this city, and her sister, Mrs. Amos Stevens, of Rushville went to Samaria Saturday evening for a short stay as guests of their father, Mr. William Kramer.

—Miss Gertrude Hoard, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Osborn, of West Fifth street for several days, returned to her home in Columbus Sunday, accompanied by her father, George Hoard.

—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tucker and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Menmuir and daughter, Miss Helen, of Connersville, and Miss Alice Kron, of Elwood, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Mahin, at their home in North Harrison street Sunday.

FIVE ADDED TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Revival at Main Street Christian Church Enthusiastic at the Very Outset

LARGE CROWDS ATTENDING

Special Music at Each Service,
Led by Prof. Charlton, Singing Evangelist

The first meetings of the revival which began at the Main Street Christian church Sunday were attended by large audiences and a general spirit of religious enthusiasm prevailed at each service. At the morning services the pastor, Dr. R. W. Abberley, preached an excellent discourse on the "Ideal Church," which was greatly appreciated. There were five additions at the morning services.

In the evening, the pastor delivered a diagram sermon on "The Divinity of Jesus," in which he illustrated an archway, termed the "Divine Archway." This archway was represented as being constructed out of a number of stones, called in the illustration, "The Words," "Character," "Miracles of Jesus," "Prophecy," the "Resurrection," and "Influence," these were held together by the key-stone, which was represented as the "Son of God."

Overhanging this archway were the stones represented as false science, criticism, sin, tradition, trouble, death, poverty, time and persecution, but none were able to break the "Divine Archway."

The discourse was a strong, comprehensive argument on the divinity of Jesus, which was made easy to understand by the diagram. The pastor said in his closing remarks "It is a hard matter to wreck a train after it has passed by, and if there are any here who dispute the divinity of Jesus, I want to say to you that you ought to have lived 1900 years ago, before the resurrection; you are now too late to dispute it, the great fact has been established and it can't be torn down at this day and age of the world."

Dr. Abberley will preach tonight on "Christ's Precious Invitation." Services will begin at 7:30 each evening this week, save Saturday evening. Mr. Charlton and Miss Ida Spurrier sang a beautiful duet "Sweet Hour of Prayer," and Mr. Charlton also sang the solo "A Clean Heart" at the evening service. Special music is a feature of the meetings.

RUSHVILLE BOY THROWS THE HARPOONE INTO THEM

Roy Abercrombie, who is now located at Ramier, Oregon, on the Columbia river, writes that he likes that country and thinks the district has a great future. Roy says he harpooned a fifteen pound salmon with a pitchfork a few days ago.

—Joe Adams went to Lafayette Sunday to see his brother, "Billy" Adams, who had his legs severed from his body underneath a freight train in that city a few nights ago.

—Shelbyville Democrat: Mrs. Mayme O'Neal and daughter, Miss Norma, of Rushville, are spending a few days with Mrs. O'Neal's sister, Mrs. Florence Downey, of this city.

—Dr. Fort, a veterinary surgeon of Pleasant Hill, Missouri, who was looking Rushville over last week, was favorably impressed with the city and says he may locate here in the spring.

—Mrs. Rilla Graham, of Freemont, Ind., is visiting at the home of Prof. David Graham, in North Main street. Prof. Graham and his cousin, Mrs. Hattie Mitchell, accompanied by their guest, Mrs. Rilla Graham went to Franklin this afternoon to visit friends and relatives.

This is a story of that great north country of which it has been said, "There's never a law of God or man runs north of fifty-three;" a tale of impetuous emotion, of brute strength and courage, of swift and passionate love and hate; a tale vigorous, forceful and absorbing, which tells itself without fine words; a story of the hunger for gold and the hunger of man for woman, brooking no interference or rivalry, going straight for its object, as did the primitive man before the time of laws and conventionalities; of civilized man turned back to savagery and losing no manhood in the turning. Tarry awhile, O reader, with these rugged men of Nome, and you shall be refreshed and strengthened in their company.

CHAPTER I.

GLENISTER gazed out over the harbor agleam with the lights of anchored ships, then up at the crenelated mountains, black against the sky. He drank the cool air burdened with its taints of the sea, while the blood of his boyhood leaped within him.

"Oh, it's fine—fine," he murmured, "and this is my country—my country, after all, Dex. It's in my veins, this hunger for the north. I grow. I expand."

"Careful you don't bust," warned Dextery. "I've seen men get plumb drunk on mountain air. Don't expand too strong in one spot." He went back abruptly to his pipe, its villainous fumes promptly averting any danger of the air's too tonic quality.

"Gad, what a smudge!" sniffed the younger man. "You ought to be in quarantine."

"I'd rather smell like a man than talk like a kid. You desecrate the hour of meditation with rhapsodies on nature when your aesthetics ain't honed up to the beauties of good tobacco."

The other laughed, inflating his deep chest. In the gloom he stretched his muscles restlessly, as though an excess of vigor filled him.

They were lounging upon the dock, while before them lay the Santa Maria ready for her midnight sailing. Behind slept Unalaska, quaint, antique and Russian, resting amid the fogs of Bering sea. Where a week before mild eyed natives had dried their cod among the old bronze cannon now a frenzied horde of gold seekers paused in their rush to the new El Dorado. They had come like a locust cloud, thousands strong, settling on the edge of the Smoky sea, waiting the going of the ice that barred them from their golden fleece—from Nome the new, where men found fortune in a night.

The mossy hills back of the village were ridged with graves of those who had died on the out trip the fall before, when a plague had gripped the land, but what of that? Gold glittered in the sands, so said the survivors. Therefore men came in armies. Glenister and Dextery had left Nome the autumn previous, the young man raving with fever. Now they returned to their own land.

"This air weds every animal instinct in me," Glenister broke out again. "Away from the cities I turn savage. I feel the old primitive passions, the fret for fighting."

"Mebbe you'll have a chance."

"How so?"

"Well, it's this way. I met Mexico Mullins this mornin'. You mind old Mexico, don't you—the feller that relocated Discovery claim on Anvil creek last summer?"

"You don't mean that 'tinhorn' the boys were going to lynch for claim jumping?"

"Identical! Remember me tellin' you about a good turn I done him once down Guadalupe way?"

"Greaser shooting scrape, wasn't it?"

"Yep. Well, I noticed first off that he's gettin' fat—high livin' fat, too, all in one spot, like he was playin' both ends agin the center. Also he wore all'mon's fit to handle with ice tongs."

"Says I, lookin' at his side elevation, 'What's accented your middle syllable so strong, Mexico?'"

"'Prosperity, politics an' the Waldorf-Astoria,' says he. It seems Mex hadn't forgot old days. He claws me into a corner an' says, 'Bill, I'm goin' to pay you back for that Moralez deal.'"

"'It ain't comin' to me,' says I."

"That's a bygone."

"Listen here," says he, an', seein' he was in earnest, I let him run on.

"How much do you value that claim o' yours at?"

"Hard tellin', says I. 'If she holds out like she run last fall, there'd ought to be a million clear in her.'"

"How much 'll you clean up this summer?"

"'Bout four hundred thousand, with luck.'"

"'Bill,' says he, 'there's hell a-poppin', an' you've got to watch that ground like you'd watch a rattlesnake.

Don't never leave 'em get a grip on it or you're down an' out."

"He was so plumb in earnest it scared me up, 'cause Mexico ain't a gabby man."

"What do you mean?" says I.

"I can't tell you nothin' more. I'm puttin' a string on my own neck sayin' this much. You're a square man, Bill, an' I'm a gambler, but you saved my life onct, an' I wouldn't steer you wrong. For God's sake, don't let 'em jump your ground, that's all."

"Let who jump it? Congress has give us judges an' courts an' marshals—I begins."

"That's just it. How you goin' to buck that hand? Them's the best cards in the deck. There's a man comin' by the name of McNamara. Watch him clost. I can't tell you no more. But don't never let 'em get a grip on your ground." That's all he'd say."

"Bah! He's crazy! I wish somebody would try to jump the Midas. We'd enjoy the exercise."

The siren of the Santa Maria interrupted, its hoarse warning throbbing up the mountain.

"We'll have to get aboard," said Dextery.

"Sh-h! What's that?" the other whispered.

At first the only sound they heard was a stir from the deck of the steamer. Then from the water below them came the rattle of rowlocks and a voice cautiously muffled.

"Stop! Stop there!"

A skiff burst from the darkness, grounding on the beach beneath. A figure scrambled out and up the ladder leading to the wharf. Immediately a second boat, plainly in pursuit of the first one, struck on the beach behind it.

As the escaping figure mounted to their level the watchers perceived with amazement that it was a young woman. Breath sobbed from her lungs, and, stumbling, she would have fallen but for Glenister, who ran forward and helped her to her feet.

"Don't let them get me," she panted. He turned to his partner in puzzled inquiry, but found that the old man had crossed to the head of the landing ladder up which the pursuers were climbing.

"Just a minute, you there! Back up or I'll kick your face in!" Dextery's voice was sharp and unexpected, and in the darkness he loomed tall and menacing to those below.

"Get out of the way. That woman's a runaway," came from the one highest on the ladder.

"So I judge."

"She broke qu'—"

"Shut up!" broke in another. "Do you want to advertise it? Get out of the way, there, ye blame fool! Climb up, Thorsen." He spoke like a bucko mate, and his words stirred the bile of Dextery.

Thorsen grasped the dock floor, trying to climb up, but the old miner stamped on his fingers, and the sailor loosened his hold with a yell, carrying the under men with him to the beach in his fall.

The old miner stamped on his fingers.

"This way! Follow me!" shouted the mate, making up the bank for the shore end of the wharf.

"You'd better pull your freight, miss," Dextery remarked. "They'll be here in a minute."

"Yes, yes! Let us go! I must get aboard the Santa Maria. She's leaving now. Come, come!"

Glenister laughed as though there were a humorous touch in her remark, but did not stir.

"I'm gettin' awful old an' stiff to run," said Dextery, removing his mackinaw, "but I allow I ain't too old for a little diversion in the way of a rough house when it comes nosin' around."

He moved lightly, though the girl could see in the half darkness that his hair was silvery.

"What do you mean?" she questioned sharply.

"You hurry along, miss. We'll toy with 'em till you're aboard." They stepped across to the dockhouse, backing against it. The girl followed.

Again came the warning blast from the steamer and the voice of an officer:

"Clear away that stern line!"

"Oh, we'll be left!" she breathed, and somehow it struck Glenister that she feared this more than the men whose approaching feet he heard.

"You can make it all right," he urged her roughly. "You'll get hurt if you stay here. Run along and don't mind us. We've been thirty days on shipboard and were praying for something to happen." His voice was boyishly glad, as if he exulted in the fray that was to come, and no sooner had he spoken than the sailors came out of the darkness upon them.

During the space of a few heartbeats there was only a tangle of whirling forms with the sound of fist on flesh, then the blot split up, and forms plunged outward, falling heavily. Again the sailors rushed, attempting to clinch. They massed upon Dextery, only to grasp empty air, for he shifted with remarkable agility, striking bitterly, as an old wolf snaps. It was baffling work, however, for in the darkness his blows fell short or overreached.

Glenister, on the other hand, stood carelessly, beating the men off as they came to him. He laughed gloatingly, deep in his throat, as though the encounter were merely some rough sport. The girl shuddered, for the desperate silence of the attacking men terrified her more than a din, and yet she stayed, crouched against the wall.

Dextery swung at a dim target and, missing it, was whirled off his balance. Instantly his antagonist grappled with him, and they fell to the floor, while a third man shuffled about them. The girl throttled a scream.

"I'm goin' to kick 'im, Bill," the man panted hoarsely. "Le' me fix 'im." He swung his heavy shoe, and Bill cursed with stirring eloquence.

"Ow! You're kickin' me! I've got 'im safe enough. Tackle the big un."

Bill's ally then started toward the others, his body bent, his arms flexed, yet hanging loosely. He crouched beside the girl, ignoring her, while she heard the breath wheezing from his lungs; then silently he leaped. Glenister had hurled a man from him, then stepped back to avoid the others, when he was seized from behind and felt the man's arms wrapped about his neck, the sailor's legs locked about his thighs. Now came the girl's first knowledge of real fighting.

The two spun back and forth so closely intertwined as to be indistinguishable, the others holding off. For what seemed many minutes they struggled, the young man striving to reach his adversary, till they crashed against the wall near her and she heard her champion's breath coughing in his throat at the tightening grip of the sailor.

Fright held her paralyzed, for she had never seen men thus. A moment and Glenister would be down beneath their stamping feet—they would kick his life out with their heavy shoes. At thought of it the necessity of action smote her like a blow in the face. Her terror fell away, her shaking muscles stiffened, and before realizing what she did she had acted.

The seaman's back was to her. She reached out and gripped him by the hair, while her fingers, tense as talons, sought his eyes. Then the first loud sound of the battle arose. The man yelled in sudden terror, and the others as suddenly fell back. The next instant she felt a hand upon her shoulder and heard Dextery's voice.

"Are ye hurt? No? Come on, then, or we'll get left." He spoke quietly, though his breath was loud, and, glancing down, she saw the huddled form of the sailor whom he had fought.

"That's all right. He ain't hurt. It's a Jap trick I learned. Hurry up!"

They ran swiftly down the wharf, followed by Glenister and by the groans of the sailors in whom the lust for combat had been quenched. As they scrambled up the Santa Maria's gangplank a strip of water widened between the boat and the pier.

"Close shave, that," panted Glenister, feeling his throat gingerly, "but I wouldn't have missed it for a spotted pup."

"I've been through b'lier explosions and snowslides, not to mention a triffin' jail delivery, but fer real sprightly diversions I don't recall nothin' more pleasin' than this." Dextery's enthusiasm was boylike.

"What kind of men are you?" the girl laughed nervously, but got no answer.

They led her to their deck cabin, where they switched on the electric light, blinking at each other and at their unknown guest.

They saw a graceful and altogether attractive figure in a trim short skirt and long tan boots. But what Glenister first saw was her eyes, large and gray, almost brown under the electric light. They were active eyes, he thought, and they flashed swift, comprehensive glances at the two men. Her hair had fallen loose and crinkled to her waist, all agleam. Otherwise she showed no sign of her recent ordeal.

Glenister had been prepared for the type of beauty that follows the frontier—beauty that may stun, but that has the polish and chill of a new ground bowie. Instead this girl with the calm, reposeful face struck a note almost painfully different from her surroundings, suggesting countless pleasant things that had been strange to him for the past few years.

Pure admiration alone was patent in the older man's gaze.

"I make oration," said he, "that you're the gamest little chap I ever fought over, Mexikin, Injun or white. What's the trouble?"

"I suppose you think I've done something dreadful, don't you?" she said. "But I haven't. I had to get away from the Ohio tonight for—certain reasons. I'll tell you all about it tomorrow. I haven't stolen anything, nor poisoned the crew—really I haven't." She smiled at them, and Glenister found it impossible not to smile with her, though dismayed by her feeble explanation.

"Well, I'll wake up the steward and find a place for you to go," he said at length. "You'll have to double up with some of the women, though. It's awfully crowded aboard."

She laid a detaining hand on his arm. He thought he felt her tremble.

"No, no! I don't want you to do that. They mustn't see me tonight. I know I'm acting strangely and all that, but it's happened so quickly I haven't found myself yet. I'll tell you tomorrow, though, really. Don't let any one see me or it will spoil everything. Wait till tomorrow, please."

She was very white and spoke with eager intensity.

"Help you? Why, sure Mike!" assured the impulsive Dextery. "An', see here, miss—you take your time on explanations. We don't care a cuss what you done. Morals ain't our long suit, 'cause there's never a law of God or man runs north of fifty-three," as the poetry man remarked, an' he couldn't have spoke truer if he'd knowed what he was sayin'.

Everybody is privileged to 'look out' his own game up here. A square deal an' no questions asked."

She looked somewhat doubtful at this till she caught the heat of Glenister's gaze. Some boldness of his look brought home to her the actual situation, and a stain rose in her cheek. She noted him more carefully—noted his heavy shoulders and ease of bearing, an ease and looseness begotten of perfect muscular control. Strength was equally suggested in his face, she thought, for he carried a marked young countenance, with thrusting chin, aggressive thatching brows and mobile mouth that whispered all the changes from strength to abandon.

Prominent was a look of reckless energy. She considered him handsome in a heavy, virile, perhaps too purely physical fashion.

"You want to stowaway?" he asked.

"I've had a right smart experience in that line," said Dextery, "but I never done it by proxy. What's your plan?"

"She will stay here tonight," said Glenister quickly. "You and I will go below. Nobody will see her."

"I can't let you do that," she objected. "Isn't there some place where I can hide?" But they reassured her and left.

When they had gone, she crouched trembling upon her seat for a long time, gazing fixedly before her. "I'm afraid," she whispered. "I'm afraid. What am I getting into? Why do men look so at me? I'm frightened. Oh, I'm sorry I undertook it."

At last she rose wearily. The close cabin oppressed her. She felt the need of fresh air. So, turning out the lights, figures loomed near the rail, and she slipped astern, screening herself behind a lifeboat, where the cool breeze fanned her face.

The forms she had seen approached, speaking earnestly. Instead of passing, they stopped abreast of her hiding place. Then as they began to talk she saw that her retreat was cut off and that she must not stir.

"What brings her here?" Glenister was echoing a question of Dextery's. "Bah! What brings them all? What brought the duchess and Cherry Malotte and all the rest?"

"No, no," said the old man. "She ain't that kind—she's too fine, too delicate—too pretty."

"That's just it—too pretty! Too pretty to be alone—or anything except what she is."

Dextery growled sourly. "This country has plumb ruined you, boy. You think they're all alike—an' I don't know but they are—all but this gal. Seems like she's different, somehow, but I can't tell."

Glenister spoke musingly: "I had an ancestor who buccaneered among the Indies a long time ago, so I'm told. Sometimes I think I have his disposition. He comes and whispers things to me in the night. Oh, he was a devil, and I've got his blood in me—untamed and hot—I can hear him saying something now—something about the spoils of war. Ha, ha! Maybe he's right. I fought for her to night, Dex—the way he used to fight for his sweethearts along the Mexicos. She's too beautiful to be good, and there's never a law of God or man runs north of fifty-three."

They moved on, his vibrant, cynical laughter stabbing the girl till she leaned against the yawl for support.

She held herself together while the blood beat thickly in her ears, then fled to the cabin, hurling herself into her berth, where she writhed silently, beating the pillow with hands into which her nails had bitten, staring the while into the darkness with dry and aching eyes.

Amusements

"Ma's New Husband," a musical comedy company, spent last night in Rushville at the Windsor hotel. They showed at Shelbyville Saturday night and will be "at Liberty" tonight.

The Vaude and Grand theatres were crowded at every performance Saturday night, both houses doing the largest one night business of the season.

Beginning tonight Miss Sadie Holmes will sing at the Vaude. Tonight the song will be, "I'll Wed You in the Golden Summer Time," which is beautifully illustrated.

The popular Grand theatre offers an exceptionally strong program of moving pictures for tonight and tomorrow night entitled, "The Gypsy's Warning," and "Purchasing an Automobile." The first subject is a fine story with a good moral, while in the subject, "Purchasing an Automobile," will be seen plenty of good, live comedy. Mr. Jones, in his endeavor to buy an automobile, certainly has the time of his life. The entire program is one of exceptional strength. This theatre guarantees to present absolutely the latest pictures and songs as fast as they can be received from the film makers. Miss Iva Brown will sing a new ballad entitled, "The Hermit of the Mississippi Shore."

At the Vaude theatre tonight will be shown 1000 feet of comic film entitled "The Clever Tailor," "The Short-sighted Sportsman," and "Motoring Under Difficulties," showing the interior of a tailor shop and the comical fitting of a customer's suit; the sportsman, who shoots everything he sees and always getting into trouble, will keep you laughing throughout the piece. The Auto man has all kinds of trouble with his mobile and finally is compelled to resort to a team of horses to take him home; this picture will be entertaining to many owners of automobiles and will cause to be remembered some of their events that they never mentioned to their friends.

Unquestionably one of the dramatic events of the season is Mr. Lawrence Evart, who is starring for the second season in a complete production of Mr. Whiteside's greatest comedy success, "We Are King."

Mr. Evart will appear at the Auditorium in Connersville next Wednesday evening, October 23d, and the company selected for him by Mr. A. W. Cross is said to be a most capable one. "We Are King" is replete with clever dialogue.

That the scenic arrangements, costumes, rehearsals and all preliminary details received Mr. Whiteside's personal attention in New York, is a guarantee of their perfection. Both press and public have received the production most cordially by crowded houses wherever he has made his appearance.

A plan to build a chain of thirty concert halls in as many large cities "for the use of classical musicians exclusively" was outlined on Wednesday by Robert E. Johnston, a former manager of musical celebrities. He declared that at least six musical firms in New York and Boston and "several financiers" were interested in the proposed circuit and that plans were already under way to build halls in this city, Brooklyn and Washington this season. Mr. Johnston said that, excepting the Symphony hall in Boston, there is no edifice in the United States absolutely devoted to the use of high class concerts at all times, as nearly all the halls in the principal cities are more than half the time used by political societies, school examinations, conventions and amateur theatricals.

Sarah Bernhardt is planning a gorgeous production of "Faust" for her next tour, which is to be her very, very last swing around the world.

Dorothy Dorr has been engaged by Charles Dillingham for a big part in "The Stepsister."

A new "Richard III." will take the field after Yuletide with scenery, costumes, etc., which cost $60,000 in good United States currency.

The latest fad is a bediamonded actress driving to the theater with an escort of two policemen to "protect her."

The Countess of Roslyn, formerly an actress known as Anna Robinson, is to return to the London stage in a play called "The Education of Elizabeth." A Scottish decree of divorce parted her from the earl, who once upon a time tried to act for Charles Frohman.

ROBERT BUTLER.

Albany Wins Pennant. The New York State league closed a successful season. Albany won the pennant after one of the most exciting finishes in the history of the league. Scranton, which had the lead for several weeks, finished second, Utica third and Troy fourth, Wilkesbarre, Syracuse, Binghamton and A. J. & G. make up the second division in the order named.

SWEDISH YACHTSMEN

America's Cup Race No New Venture For Them.

TRIED FOR TROPHY IN 1852.

Schooner Sverige Also Raced the America the Following Year—Are Well Prepared to Build Speedy Boat. Some Good Swedish Designers.

Sweden's meteoric rise to an America's cup possibility from almost oblivion in yachting, so far as this country was concerned, has caused widespread interest in the sailors of that far north country. The feats of the Norsemens are known to the schoolboy even in Dakota, but somehow they have rarely been associated with the sailing of pleasure yachts. Yet it is a fact that a Swedish schooner, the Sverige, was one of the starters in the race around the Isle of Wight for the queen's cup which the schooner America won, says the New York Herald.

In 1852, the following year, when the America had been sold to Lord John de Blaquiere, an officer in the British Indian army, a match was made with the Sverige for $500 a side. The race was sailed in October of that year, and on the first leg, which was down the wind, the Sverige led the America by 8 minutes 26 seconds. It was a beat home, and as the Swedish yacht hauled on the wind the jaws of her main gaff broke, and they had to be lashed. A fog then set in, and the Sverige overtook Nab light so that she was beaten twenty-five minutes.

Swedes have since maintained that the Sverige was a better boat than the America and that she would have won if she had not been unfortunate.

Today Sweden occupies a position in yachting that is wholly independent of the other countries of Europe. The Royal Swedish Yacht club adopted the universal rule of measurement with the other European clubs a year ago, but it still keeps to its old rule, which has developed a racing machine pure and simple; hence it may be well prepared to build a challenger to sail for the America's cup now that only out and out racers are acceptable. But the Swedish craft are small.

Of several yachts there that have shown good sailing qualities the San Toy has been the most conspicuous. It is said that her performances prompted Swedish yachtsmen to consider sending a challenge, yet she is only a small craft and without her rigging could actually be carried on the Reliance's deck. She is owned by Goesta Kyhlberger, a banker of Stockholm. Recently the San Toy and the Hesper, which is owned by Vilh Olsson, a Stockholm merchant, sailed a long race for 1,100 crowns, to be given to the Seamen's home in Stockholm. Such a prize in place of a cup is thought there to further the interest in sailing.

It is the small size of the boats that makes it doubtful whether the Swedes, with all their enthusiasm and with all their experience, can race with any degree of success in the America's cup class. Sixty footers are about as large as their designers and builders have turned out.

Albert Anderson, who drew the lines of the Phenix and those of the Zephyr, is one of the best known Swedish designers. Others whose boats have done well at the Kiel races in Germany are C. O. Liljgren, Henning Heglund and Lindstrom, but John Carlson, the Swedish manufacturer and the prime mover in the proposal to challenge, determined to design a challenger himself and to have her built by Gunnar Mellgren at the Neglinge wharf, outside of Stockholm. He decided to follow as far as possible the Margnehe type, which he constructed.

Mr. Carlson has made a number of innovations in form of hull and of equipment that have been adopted generally in Swedish waters. The announcement that as far as practicable wood would be employed in the construction of the challenger instead of metal occasioned no little surprise here.

One of Mr. Carlson's greatest ambitions, it seems, has been to compete for the America's cup. He always sails his own craft and is a splendid navigator. Besides, he possesses the rare quality of arousing enthusiasm in his crew. He has secured several triumphs in Scandinavian waters, once taking the famous Oeresunds cup.

It has been suggested that, as many of the Deer Island sailors are Swedes, it would be necessary to seek a crew for the defender elsewhere. Captain Barr has employed only Norwegian sailors for two years and could well stick to them, as the competition between the two northern countries is rather high strung, and the Norwegians would be only too glad to help beat their Swedish neighbors.

Record Year For Alpine Accidents.

The mortality because of Alpine accidents has been particularly heavy during the past summer. In point of fact the number of victims during the summer of 1907 has been the greatest ever recorded, says the Independent. Eighty persons were killed and twenty-two suffered injuries in ninety accidents this year. The highest previous record was last year, when there were seventy-six fatalities in seventy-one accidents. Of the eighty persons killed, thirty-one were persons spending vacation periods in the Alps, and the remaining eleven were flower gatherers, etc. Seventy-five per cent of the fatalities arose because of falls over precipices. Avalanches, snowstorms and lightning caused the others.

OWNER CONTROLS SPEED.

An Ingenious Automobile Device That Gives Remarkable Service.

At last the owner of a car may be superior to his chauffeur. He may not be at the steering wheel, and yet may control the speed of the automobile. He can sit comfortably in a tonneau or in the rear seat of a limousine and yet regulate the running of the machine. Like the captain of a ship, he may actually govern, and the chauffeur will be nothing more than the pilot. This revolution is brought about by a contrivance perfected by Joseph W. Jones of New York city, says the New York Herald.

By the use of this device any one in the tonneau or on the rear seat of a car is enabled to have positive control of the car's speed. He does this through the simple operation of an electrical switch having five or more points of contact representing circuits.

If the owner desires his car not to exceed the ten mile limit he throws his switch to the ten mile contact. When the speed indicator shows the ten mile speed the spark is immediately cut off, and it is impossible for the car to reach a higher speed. The effect will be the same when the controller is set at fifteen, twenty, twenty-five or thirty miles.

Drivers with insane desires to "scorch" or "hit it up" at "sixty per" through crowded thoroughfares will not necessarily be benefited by the new invention, but this class is in the minority, and the chances are that the device will win favor with the law abiding classes. Not only may the owner regulate the speed while he is in the car, but he may set and lock the controlling device at any speed he desires when he leaves the car to the mercy of the chauffeur. A governor set at ten miles will be a positive discourager of "joy riding" by chauffeurs.

The automatic speed control governor or not only will be invaluable to the owner, but it is calculated to be of benefit to the driver as well. If the latter is alone and wishes to relieve himself of the anxiety of watching the speed indicator constantly for the purpose of keeping within the legal rate, before starting he can set the switch at fifteen miles or twenty miles and feel comfortable in the knowledge that there need be no fear of arrest.

CAMP ON HOTEL ROOF.

Philadelphia Hostelry Supplies Tents For Guests Who Want Them.

Anybody who yearns to "sleep under the stars," who finds a big bedroom too confining, can camp out on the roof of the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, Philadelphia, now, says a Philadelphia special to the New York World.

A judge arrived at the Bellevue-Stratford from the Adirondacks recently. Next day he complained that the street noises kept him awake and that anyhow a room was too pent up for a man who had been sleeping out of doors. So the manager pitched a tent on the roof, which is incased in glass. The judge has been sleeping like a top, twenty stories up, 310 feet above the street.

Soon there will be a grove of little pine and spruce trees on the roof in which will stand twenty tents, each one with a portable bathtub and a telephone. Servants, costumed as guides, probably will be in attendance, but the campers must eat their venison and bear steaks in the hotel dining rooms. If the camp's atmosphere grows too close the glass dome can be opened. Then the wind will whistle through the trees. The camp will be maintained all winter probably.

FRESH FISH AT SEA.

Steamship Amerika Has a Trout Pool For Epicures.

On a recent voyage of the steamship Amerika there was a novelty for the passengers. There were four tanks stocked with trout and carp on the deck, and the fish swam around until they fascinated some passenger, who told the steward which one he wanted, and then it was caught and cooked for him.

The fish were in charge of Ernest Marquardt. Dr. George L. Eriweln, an aquarist of Hamburg, had the task of keeping the fish healthy, and all that were not eaten made the trip in good condition. The steward said that about 500 trout and 150 carp were sold on the voyage.

The tanks, big zinc affairs, filled with fresh water, are housed away up on the top of the ship, near the base of the smokestacks. The water is supplied with fresh oxygen by pumping it into the tops of little towers, where through punctures the fresh air comes in touch with it, and thus the trout are kept alive and jumping.

Tragedy at the Telephone.

Answering in person a hurry call on the wire from Hammon, N. J., Mrs. Jeanette Coast, chief operator in the Bell Telephone company main exchange in Atlantic City, listened to an account of the death of her own husband, Ralph Coast, chief of linemen, and then fell in a faint. Coast lost his balance while working at the top of a sixty foot pole on the outskirts of Hammon, but managed to grip a cross arm as he fell. Men rushed to his aid, but before they could ascend the pole his strength gave out and he fell to his death. Those who sent the news to Hammon had no idea of the identity of the receiver until they heard her shriek at the close of the report.

The New Steel Box Cars.

Steel box cars have been built recently which will weigh about 3,000 pounds less than wooden cars of the same size and capacity.

A SISTER'S DEVOTION

Long Journey of Philadelphia Girl to Save Her Brother.

VICTIM OF OPIUM CURSE.

Miss Agnes Haviland Traveled Thousands of Miles to Secure a Recently Discovered Plant Said to Have Cured Many of the Habit.

Determined to save her brother from the opium habit, no matter what the cost might be to her, Miss Agnes Haviland of Philadelphia has just returned from a trip to the west Malay peninsula, where she obtained a cure, says a special dispatch to the St. Louis Republic. Having traveled thousands of miles, endured privations of every sort and character, this heroine, with an ample supply of the remedy obtained from fresh plants in that faroff land, is putting into effect the published accounts of the efficacy of the antidote.

Miss Haviland spent about a month in and around Selangor, capital of the west Malay peninsula, and the horrors due to the opium habit seem like a nightmare to her. This was converted into a pleasant dream, however, when she noted the many cures made by the little, recently discovered plant.

Her brother has been a victim of the opium curse for several years. First taken as a soothing drug to relieve mental and physical distress, he had to increase the amount taken almost daily as the deadening effects of the smaller doses were decreased. Slowly, but surely, he became enmeshed in the clutches of the distilled poppy until his life was a burden to him.

Then he appealed to his sister. There was nothing she could do. She had engaged the best physicians in Philadelphia, but each had given up her brother's case as hopeless. One day she read a story in a newspaper that an opium cure had been discovered. From an article based on a report of Consul General D. F. Wilbur she learned that the Malays had really discovered a cure for the habit.

Frail of physique, but dauntless in her will, Miss Haviland finally determined to get this cure if possible. First, however, she would make a personal investigation. In June she left her home and journeyed across the continent to Seattle, where she embarked on her long ocean voyage.

"I talked with Consul General Wilbur of the cure," said Miss Haviland, "and his testimony established my faith in the vine. The scientific name of this plant is Combreum undulatum and not Tamal bsi, as some seem to think."

"From Mr. Wilbur and others I found that the way to prepare this vine for use was as follows: First, boil over a gentle charcoal fire in the proportion of three pounds of water to one ounce of the precious drug for about four hours till half the original water remains. Second, strain the preparation and leave it to cool, and it is ready for use. Third, fill two brandy bottles with the preparation. Into bottle A put burnt opium to the quantity the patient used to consume in one day. The opium will dissolve at once with a milky color. Fourth, take two tablespoonfuls of the mixture from bottle A whenever the patient craves for opium, shake the bottle before use and directly after each dose is taken fill the same quantity of the preparation from bottle B into bottle A. No opium is to be put into the medicine after the first bottle."

Continuing her story, Miss Haviland said: "Upon visiting the Chinese towkay who had introduced the medicine in Seremban with good effect I learned that the leaf had been discovered in Jebebu by a young man who was an opium smoker. He had been told by a friend to take the leaf of a certain plant growing in the jungle and to boil it and drink the medicine. He did so and found that he could break off his opium habit. He told others about it, and when the Seremban towkay went to Jebebu to collect his home rents he was told of the medicine. He ordered his mining coolies to collect the plant for him and then introduced it into Seremban."

"The Chinese preachers and young men enthusiastically took up the matter, and the medicine was prepared at the mission hall. The news spread, and hundreds came every day until the mission hall and street outside became blocked with people. Never shall I forget the touching spectacle of these men eagerly asking for help, children coming asking for the cure for their fathers."

She saw the Rev. W. E. Horley, who has done so much to spread the cure among the Malays, and from him obtained two sacks of the precious remedy, which is a vine not unlike the American morning glory, and has come home a messenger of good cheer to her stricken brother.

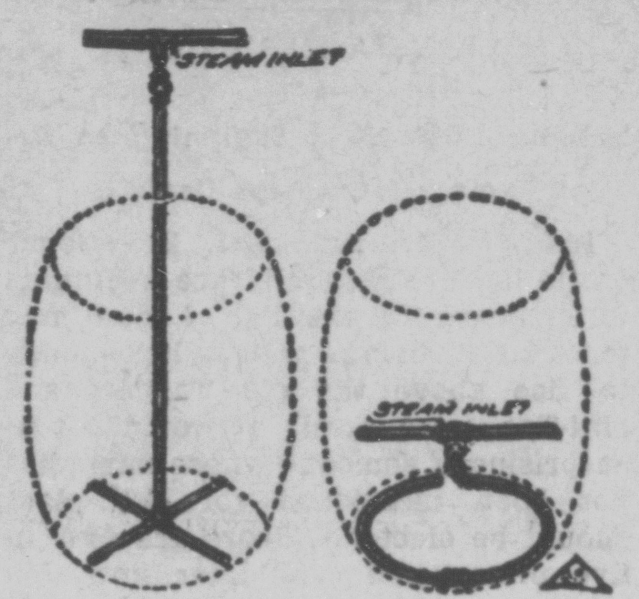

That the remedy is effective is believed by Miss Haviland because of instances which came under her observation. She saw one Chinaman, who had been a user of the drug for fifteen years, break his pipes and with an ax destroy the bunk on which he reposed when under the opiate influence. She saw 300 men and women, each with a bottle or some vessel with which to carry the remedy, come daily to the depots where the Selangor Antiochian society gave free medicine to those afflicted. Government officials of the Malay peninsula told her that the importation of the drug had already been reduced from eighty to thirty chests each month and was still falling.

Farm, Field and Garden

STEAM COOKING.

An Improved Arrangement of Pipe For Quick Work.

The most common way of cooking grains and other food in barrels and kettles is to insert the pipe which conveys the steam from the boiler into the contents of the barrel and allow the steam to pass out of the one opening in the end of the pipe and rise through the slop or soaked feed. By this plan a good deal of steam escapes on the surface before it is exhausted. An improvement over this way of turning the steam into the feed is illustrated

STEAM COOKER.

In the drawing. One drawing shows two pipes which have been arranged at right angles at the end of the inlet pipe, and little holes have been bored in the upper surfaces of these to allow the steam to pass up into the feed in small jets. The other plan shows where the steam inlet is near the bottom of the barrel and continues as a circular pipe around the bottom. In the upper surface small holes have been bored to allow the escape of steam, as in the first instance. When food is cooked with this kind of an arrangement of pipe it is more quickly done and at less for steam than where a single opening is used.—Iowa Homestead.

SWEET POTATOES.

Proper Temperature Should Be Provided to Prevent Rot.

In order to lessen or prevent rot the potatoes should be perfectly dry when put in storage and kept dry throughout the period of storage. During the sweating period just after the roots are stored care should be taken to see that proper ventilation is provided and that the temperature be kept at about 70 degrees. The temperature, in case enough roots are stored to make the erection of a regular storage house profitable, may best be secured by means of a small stove. Where the roots are stored in the usual dirt covered piles it is important not to let water get on them whenever they are opened to remove any potatoes. The fungus requires a certain amount of moisture for its most rapid development, and this is too often furnished by carelessness in opening these piles.

Never employ diseased roots to secure sets. Destroy by burning all diseased roots and sets, and do not feed the diseased roots to animals if the resulting manure is to be placed upon the field where the potatoes are to be grown. In general commercial fertilizers are preferable in sweet potato culture on the above account, and particularly in the beds employed for the growing of the sets. As you select your sets it may be well to lift the root and discard sets coming from roots showing the rot. Do not place diseased potatoes in storage, as the loss may be very great. The young sets if diseased may be sprayed with bordeaux mixture. If the disease has proved serious during the past year, it would be well to mix a tablespoonful of sulphur with the soil about each set as it is planted. Practice rotation of fields if one field becomes too badly infected with the fungus. Collect and burn all diseased roots and stems.—E. M. Wilcox.

The Corn Breeding Plot.

The following advice to New England corn breeders is given in Rural New Yorker by E. M. East, Connecticut experiment station, who says: The corn breeder cannot afford to sell the product from his breeding plot. He should make a second selection of all the good seed ears from the best yielding rows of the plot and mix the seed together to plant a field, from the product of which he can sell to his customers. Care should be taken to have this field also isolated from other kinds of corn in order to prevent crossing. It is care in all the small points that counts, for we are not apt to make mistakes in the large generalities. There is great reason to believe that by the use of proper methods of selection, accurate tests of germination and proper treatment of the soil we can double our present corn yields, greatly increase our profits and still maintain the fertility of our soil.

Kieffer Pears.

Delaware grown Kieffer pears, delayed ten days before being shipped to cold storage, continued to ripen and soften in storage and were injured at least 50 per cent in commercial value by the delay. The effect of delay upon small fruits is very much greater. In the case of fruit designed for cold storage a delay of twelve hours in hot weather will shorten the period of keeping by several days, while a delay of twenty-four hours may give time for mold to appear and the fruit be rendered entirely worthless for storage purposes.—S. H. Fulton.

Our New and Enlarged Paper.

As proud as a boy with a brand new pair of red-top boots are we of the enlarged daily and semi-weekly publications. Of course the leather has not stretched yet, and in some places the boots pinch a little, but we are proud of them nevertheless. For several days we have been on the qui vive, and we trust that in this instance realization will be far better than anticipation.

With this issue the Republican—both the Daily and the Tuesday and Friday editions—appears in an enlarged form, an eight-paged paper. The steady growth of the patronage of the Republican, both in subscription and advertising, has made it possible to take this step.

The Republican prides itself to be one of the best county-seat dailies in the State, and it is the intention to not alone keep up the standard, but to inaugurate improvements as fast as conditions will warrant.

A newspaper is a business proposition, and besides its subscription patronage, advertisements are necessary for its financial success. Under the new form the Republican is enabled to give advertising patrons more space and better positions, and at the same time furnish its subscribers plenty of reading matter of a varied nature—all the local news diligently gathered by a competent staff of reporters and correspondents, all the important telegraph news of each day's events, miscellaneous reading matter for entertainment and instruction, and a fascinating serial story.

In short, the Republican will continue to be one of the foremost newspapers in this part of the State, and the publisher trusts that his efforts in that direction will be duly appreciated and that he will meet with the encouragement his enterprise deserves.

When the Pastor Grows Old.

By Bishop HENRY C. POTTER of New York.

NOTHING CAN BE MORE BEAUTIFUL THAN THE PATERNAL AND PASTORAL SORT OF KINSHIP BETWEEN A PASTOR AND HIS PEOPLE. HIS LIGHT IS THEN LIKE A FIXED STAR—CERTAIN, STEADY, UNWAVERING.

An UNFORTUNATE period arrives in the life of every minister of God. It may be likened to the obscuration of a planet. The brilliance with which he started his career is bedimmed. He appears to grow commonplace. He refutes himself, perhaps, in his discourses. HIS ORIGINALITY SEEMS GONE. There is a mere faint trace remaining of what was a bright light. His people, especially the younger people, are quick to realize that more stirring sermons are being preached by newer, fresher men.

BUT THEY DO NOT REALIZE IT ANY QUICKER—AND THIS IS THE PATHETIC PART—THAN DOES THE AGING MINISTER HIMSELF.

Sending the fleet to the Pacific opens the eyes of the country to its responsibilities on both sides of the continent, and in consequence the U. S. naval board has decided to ask Congress to authorize the building of twenty-four warships.

Chattanooga has arranged a big reception to President Roosevelt tomorrow. The solid South of late has been showing enthusiasm of a new kind, causing Gov. Vardaman to say that even the Mississippians have lost their reason.

The present campaign in Kentucky is remarkable for the breaking up of old Democratic lines in that State. At a Louisville meeting in behalf of the Republican ticket three of the speakers were Confederate soldiers and one the son of a Confederate member of Congress.

Notwithstanding the various objections raised against the parcels post, it is believed that this would be one of the most popular measures that could be taken up by the government. The charges of the express companies have become almost intolerable of late years, having actually increased since the rate bill went into operation. Anything which would bring these oppressive monopolies to reason, would be a welcome relief to all classes of shippers.

Perhaps by next spring the labor situation, especially on farms, will be more clear. Many industrial concerns are cutting down their force of workmen, and various public enterprises requiring labor have come to a halt because of disturbed conditions in the money market. There are more men looking for work than was the case a few months ago, and if present tendencies continue, it may be possible that before another crop season, help may be hired at moderate prices.

It is a gratifying surprise to learn that an old French dredge, which has been lying in the jungles at Panama for the last twenty years, has been rebuilt at a moderate cost and is doing as much work as four modern 95-ton steam shovels. The story of the reconstruction of this derelict reads like a romance, for the various parts which have been used in its reconstruction were found in the jungle or among other abandoned material scattered along the line of the canal, all of which had lain neglected and exposed to the action of the elements for fully two decades. As soon as this machine will be in active operation, there will be a marked increase in the total yardage removed from the canal bed.

The new transatlantic steamship, Lusitania, is steadily breaking all records, and it must now be classed as a four-day boat—making the trip between Queenstown and New York in four and a half days. As soon as this ship will average regularly 24½ knots an hour, she will receive an annual subsidy from the British government of $750,000.

In looking back over the records of fifty years of transatlantic travel, it is interesting to note how steady has been the increase in speed and the reduction in time. In 1856, 9 days was a remarkable record. In 1836 the record was cut to 8 days, 2 hours, and in 1869 to 7 days and 22 hours. It took eleven years to bring the record below 7 days, the "Alaska" making the trip in 1882 in 6 days and 18 hours. Seven years later, in 1889, the record was reduced to 5 days and 19 hours. To develop the four-day boat has required eighteen additional years of development.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT C. TUCKER.
SEEKING A DARK HORSE

Indiana Democrats Beginning to Declare for a New Deal.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 21.—Democratic leaders generally are beginning to demand the election of some man for state chairman who is big enough to rise above the old Taggart and anti-Taggart quarrel. It would not be surprising if someone whose name has not been mentioned for the place should be elected. There are four or five prospective candidates now, but there is no strong sentiment for any one of them. Someone is wanted who has not been too closely identified with any factional strife.

Captain Harry S. New left here Saturday for Washington to arrange for a meeting of the Republican national committee in December to determine where the next Republican national convention will be held. St. Louis, Chicago and Kansas City are the most active applicants for the convention. Seattle, Denver, St. Paul and Philadelphia are asking for it, but it is believed that some city more centrally located will get it.

The field for the Democratic nomination for governor promises to be larger than that of the Republicans who are aspiring to the highest office in the state. There probably will be five or six candidates for governor in the Democratic state convention. The list of avowed candidates includes Rev. Thomas Kuhn of Richmond, and Judge R. K. Erwin of Decatur. Thos. R. Marshall of Columbia City, and Senator L. Ert Slack of Franklin, are candidates, although they have not made public announcement to that effect. S. M. Ralston of Lebanon is a candidate, although he wants the party to force him to take the place on the ticket. Congressman J. A. M. Adair of Portland still hopes to get the nomination, and C. K. McCullough of Anderson, W. T. Durbin's brother-in-law, admits that he has the bee. There are but four candidates for governor on the Republican side, and it is not believed that the list will be increased. The Democratic leaders seem to feel confident that the outlook is very bright for a victory for their party. Under the circumstances it is likely that for the first time in twelve years there will be a field of enthusiastic candidates that will make the Democratic convention well worth attending. The Democratic race for governor is "warming up," although the candidates are not so strenuous as those on the Republican side. The Republican candidates are beginning to beat the bushes briskly for delegates, and it is likely that their fight will be on in full blast soon, as they anticipate an early convention.

Speaker Branch of Martinsville is being talked of as a probable candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor. He has not determined what course he will pursue, but his friends believe he will not make the race this time for a place on the state ticket. It is not unlikely that he will become a candidate for congress in the Fifth district.

Shelbyville papers are now days devoting considerable of their valuable space in telling the posterity of that hamlet how Greensburg crawled in sending a large delegation to the coliseum skating rink one evening this week.

AFFINITY STUNT IN SHELBY.

(Shelbyville Republican.)

And now it is said that a man doing business on the public square had a big fuss Saturday morning and one of the clerks got tangled up in the affair and he was pitched out of the place. The woman went to her home, got the children and then went to the inter-urban station, intending to go to Indianapolis, when she was persuaded to return home. Such is life.

Although this is the closed season, a hunting party will be the feature of a festival conducted under the auspices of the Second M. E. church next Wednesday evening. A dollar will be hidden about the premises and for ten cents one may join in the hunt. Whoever finds the "silver belle of Liberty" may keep it for their reward. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the church.

The Lady In the Park.

[Copyright, 1907, by Harry Heron.] Mr. Harold Clancy strolling in St. James' park, London, saw a good looking lady sitting on a bench. Concluding by her appearance that she as well as himself was an American, he noticed her as he passed, then turned and walked back. She looked him in the face and continued to do so until he stood before her. Then as he doffed his hat and bowed she smilingly and sweetly said:

"I knew that you were an American and would come back. Will you sit down?"

Mr. Clancy sat down after excusing himself. The nursegirls in the vicinity giggled, and a policeman passing along winked at him in a solemn manner, but he refused to be perturbed. In a few minutes he discovered that he had made no mistake. The good looking lady was not only an American, but a resident of Chicago when at home. She was also a widow of two years' standing. She had come over to London, chaperoned by her mother and escorted by her lawyer, to see about some property. Her mother had been taken ill and was then unable to leave her bed in the lodgings the lawyer had secured for them. She herself had got out that day for the first time in a week to get a breath of fresh air. The story up to this point did not call for any great amount of sympathy, but there was more to it. The lawyer had suddenly and mysteriously disappeared. For a week nothing had been heard of him. He hadn't played any slyster trick on them, but had probably been murdered. She and her mother had discussed the matter in all its bearings and could come to no other conclusion.

The good looking lady had not gone to the police, nor had she notified the American minister. She was feeling helpless in the matter and wishing she had the advice of a compatriot in her troubles. Harold Clancy was willing and anxious to advise. He convinced her almost at once, but it was an hour later when she asked him to convince her mother. The poor convalescent was worrying her heart out and would probably have a relapse unless she were convinced that the lawyer had been abducted and held for ransom instead of being robbed and hung over the embankment to float around in the muddy waters of the Thames. Could she dare she ask Mr. Clancy to call at her house and cheer and comfort her mother?

Mr. Clancy promptly replied that she could. He would go with her at once—right away. His motto was, "Mothers comforted and cheered while you wait." There were tears of gratitude in the lady's eyes, but his promptness was a little too prompt. She must for several reasons, some of which she mentioned and some she didn't, ask him to defer his call until evening. When this point had been settled they rose and separated. The nursegirls giggled again, and the policeman came back with his solemn wink, but the good looking lady pretended not to see or hear, and Mr. Clancy scowled at the nurses and clinched his fist at the guardian of the peace and vowed that he would lick him if he ever caught the fellow in America.

There were four hours to wait. Mr. Clancy went to his hotel to think and dine. The lady (without the adjective this time) had not lisped the remotest hint that money was needed. On the contrary, she had carried the opposite idea. Mr. Clancy was an astute man, however. He could see through a square hole in a round grindstone. He had often been heard to say that the want of money caused nine-tenths of the troubles in this world. He had money in the hotel safe. He drew it out and shoved it down a hind pocket and felt himself healed. He would advise and comfort and cheer the mother with words, but not with words alone. When the proper moment came he would spring his "wad" and beg mother and daughter to accept a few hundreds as a loan. As he thought of their tears and sobs of gratitude he had to use his own handkerchief to chase away the welling tears. The waiter half expected to be asked if there was any eyewater on the bill of fare.

The hour arrived. So did Mr. Clancy. It was a walk of only a quarter of a mile, and he stepped out briskly. His ring at the bell was answered by a young girl who might have been dressed and who might have had her hair combed and her shoes tied, but Mr. Clancy didn't dwell on trifles. He was told that he was expected and to walk upstairs and knock at the first door to the right. He followed instructions, and the door was opened, but he had scarcely set foot inside the room when he received a blow from a sand bag and knew no more for hours. When he regained consciousness a policeman had him on a handbarrow and on his way to a police station. He hadn't any clothes on worth mentioning, and of course his money and jewelry had disappeared. The police called it a "plant," and they chuckled over its being a good "plant," too. St. James' park was watched for the next month, but the woman of good looks came no more. For a month Mr. Clancy had a headache and couldn't do any astute thinking. Then the ache let up, and he announced to himself that he was an idiot from over the pond and wanted to forget the whole thing as soon as possible.

CURRENT COMMENT

A Lesson For Husbands.

A play translated from the French and recently put on the boards in New York has the usual fling at the ambitious wife and has made a hit. The lesson for wives is well brought out, judging from the many editorial comments upon the play. But the moral for husbands should not be lost sight of while condemning the folly of the wife.

The name of the play, "The Thief," does not fairly indicate the motive of the dramatist. Thievery is incidental to the wife's passion for the admiration of her husband. She sees that he has eyes for women who are well dressed and have style, but none for herself. He does not give her the means to dress according to his taste; hence she steals in order to win the attention which she believes her right.

Dresses and good looks are trivial things, and sensible women do not mourn if they do not possess them unless the lack of them stands in the way of their keeping the affections of their husbands. Seldom do women in this country go so far as did the French wife whose pitiful struggle is depicted in "The Thief." But no doubt there are some American wives whose feelings are bitter and whose temptation is great. They strive in devious and doubtful ways to bedeck themselves and after all may conclude that the game is not worth the candle. Love so gained is generally a poor return for the sacrifice. Women take their husbands as they find them—tall or short, fat or thin, well mannered or uncouth. Husbands who insist that their spouses shall be as attractive as other women should pay the price, at the same time remembering that the wife is no better for her plumage and that it is only their own eyes which are at fault.

City and Country For Scholars.

The conclusion reached by Mr. Walter H. Page in World's Work that it is better to locate colleges in the city than in the country is sharply challenged by American Medicine in a recent editorial. Mr. Page made a series of investigations last year and advised the establishment of colleges in cities, where, he says, temptations are no greater than in villages. Says American Medicine:

City life is very deadly to the young, a fact known to anthropologists for a long time, and we are now in a fair way to explain the phenomenon. For hundreds of years country families have flocked to the towns, to die out in a few generations, so that cities are said to be consumers of rural populations. A man raised in the country seems to stand the unknown strain, but his children sometimes perish long before he does. Every physician knows of these disappearing families where the country bred parents survive all their city bred children. The trolley system which permits suburban homes is doing more for the survival of these types than the lay public realizes. Mr. Page's advice, then, to continue the damage by establishing the colleges in the cities, is deadly and should be rebuked by the medical profession at once.

These conclusions are entitled to a hearing. It is claimed that the cities offer college boys a broader view of life. But during school days this advantage may be a hindrance rather than a help to sound education. Boys should not lose their youthful illusions too early. They'll become cynical fast enough when they strike the real problems of life. Boys inured to city life have a certain kind of precocity, but it is a fact, as American Medicine points out, that a "tremendous percentage of noted men have been educated, out of the cities."

There are nine chances out of ten that Miss Mary Cunningham is as good an American as those who object to her face being placed on our gold coins. In the United States the spelling of a name does not indicate the nationality of the person bearing it. There are descendants of Dutch, German, French and Irish in this country whose ancestors made it their home long before the Revolution. If they are not Americans, then there are no Americans.

A symposium of dramatists and managers recently decided that the high level of ignorance among American stage artists makes ideal presentation of plays impossible. That's because the brains of the artists of both sexes are bent solely upon physical good looks.

Richmond P. Hobson claims to have inside information to the effect that Japan will declare war on the United States on Feb. 28. With very little urging it is believed that she can be induced to put it off till April 1.

The New York waiters are to have a clubhouse of their own in the fashionable club district. In spite of this New Yorkers will continue to excuse fifty cent tips by saying that the waiters need the money.

A college which beat a university 4 to 0 at football naturally looks down upon such a trifling thing as a $3,000,000 gift with an antisports string tied to it.

GOT THREE BEARS

In Addition to This the President Bagged Six Deer and Much Lesser Game.

ATE ALL BUT THE WILD CAT

And at Times the Crowd Almost Felt That They Could Eat That, Says the President.

Details of Hunting Trip Have Been Given Out by the Head of the Expedition.

Vicksburg, Miss., Oct. 21.—President Roosevelt arrived at Delta, directly across the river from Vicksburg, at 1 o'clock this afternoon. He was met by a reception committee of 100 citizens on board the steamboat Belle of the Bends, and the party proceeded at once to Vicksburg. A drive over the city and through the national cemetery will end at the courthouse square, where President Roosevelt will deliver an address. The president will then board a special train on the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley railroad and will go direct to Memphis, where his train will be transferred to the Louisville & Nashville railroad. The president is scheduled to arrive in Nashville at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Stamboul, La., Oct. 21.—"We got three bears, six deer, one wild turkey, twelve squirrels, one duck, one possum and one wildcat. We ate them all except the wildcat and there were times when we almost felt as if we could eat that."

This was President Roosevelt's summing up of the results of his hunt on Bayou Tensas and Bear Lake. He arrived at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the residence of Leo Shields, where he was a guest until he took his departure for Vicksburg today. He came in on a full gallop and, accompanied as he was by about a dozen of his hunting companions, all mounted and attired in hunting garb, the cavalcade presented a tableau as picturesque as it was animated. The president is slightly more bronzed than when he entered the wilderness from this point fifteen days ago, but notwithstanding this fact and the additional circumstances that his skin as well as his clothes bear evidence of contact with the cane and other brush, he was never in better spirits in his life.

"Yes, we got three bears," he added, "all that we saw, and I think a pretty good record. I am perfectly satisfied."

"You might add," interjected one of the Metcalf brothers, who has been the president's principal guide during the hunt, "that we hunted a country of vast extent and in which there were but five bears all told, and that of these, as you see, we got three."

Assenting to this amplification of his statement, the president entered upon an enthusiastic account of his hunt, of his life in camp and the meats with which he had been supplied while there.

"Was the 'possum good?" he was asked.

"Absolutely the best dish we had, except the bears' liver," he responded with relish.

The president when he said this, stood on the lawn in front of Mr. Shields's house. Around him were gathered Mr. Shields and a number of guests whom he had invited to dine with the president. In the distance were gathered the negro hunters, Holt Collier, Alex Ennolds, Brutus Jackson and numerous cooks, teamsters and messengers, while the horses stood in the yard and the dogs lay around licking their lacerated bodies, many of the animals being in bad condition on account of the long chase and others as a result of contact with wild hogs, wildcats and other wild things. The president was the central figure of the group, and he never appeared in happier frame of mind than on this occasion. He declared that his health had been perfect, his appetite equally good, and, with the exception of a day or two lost on account of rain, had been in the saddle every day from daylight to dark. He ended by declaring that he had never in his life had finer sport.

The arrival of the party brought out the fact that a third bear had been killed on Friday, a two-year-old which was slain by one of the Osborn brothers when it was in a fierce fight with the dogs. The one bear that was obtained by the president was killed on Thursday, and the killing was witnessed by one of the McKenzies and Alex Ennolds. They agree in saying that the president's bearing was extremely sportsmanlike. The animal had been chased by the dogs for three hours, the president following all the time. When at last they came within hearing distance, the president dismounted from his horse, dashed off his coat and tore into the cane brake, coming to within twenty paces of the beast. The dogs were coming up rapidly, with the president's favorite, "Rowdy," in the lead, and the brute had stopped to bid defiance to them when the president sent a bullet from his 45-70 rifle hurling through the thicket after it. The shot went through the animal's lights and would have been fatal, but with the little life in it, the bear turned upon the dogs. The president concluded to end it all, and lodged a second bullet between the shoulders, which broke the creature's neck.

Other members of the party were not long in coming up and the president was so rejoiced over his good fortune that he embraced each of his companions. They were equally happy, and in the exuberance of the moment Ennolds went to the extent of telling the president that, the president, was "no tenderfoot." The president responded by presenting him with a $20 note.

Saturday there was comparatively little hunting because of the condition of the dogs, some of which encountered a drove of wild hogs, which are more ferocious than bears. One of the best dogs of the Osborn pack was killed outright by a big bear.

In honor of the president, the name of this place was today changed to Roosevelt.

A NEW AIRSHIP

The Gyroplane May Be What We Have Been Waiting For.

Paris, Oct. 21.—A new principle for aerial navigation with heavier-than-air machines have been employed in some recent experiments and gives promise of large results. Instead of using planes on the box-kite principle driven by a vertical propeller, as in the case in the aeroplanes of Santos DuMont and other experimenters up to this time, rotary horizontal planes are used. In other words the gyroscopic principle is employed and the machine is called the gyroplane. The theory is that by the employment of horizontal propellers the machine can be easily lifted and lowered after the fashion of the old "helicopter" toy, longitudinal motion being obtained by the force of gravitation by allowing the machine to dip and glide on its planes in the same way that heavy birds soar.

Count De Lambert believes that this is the true solution of aerial flight, but the honor of constructing the first machine on this principle belongs to Louis Breguet. He has built a machine in the general form of a Saint Andre's cross, each arm having at its extremity eight revolving paddles or propellers, slightly inclined. These thirty-two paddles present a total surface of twenty-five square meters and are revolved by a forty-horse power motor at the center of the cross, where the pilot sits. The total weight of the machine is 578 kilograms. In the preliminary trials the machine left the ground instantly when the motor was set in motion and was easily sustained in the air with 78 revolutions a minute. When the motor was slowed down the gyroplane descended gently. Perfect equilibrium was maintained. The longitudinal flight has not yet been attempted, but the inventor thinks it will be easy to make seventy-five kilometres an hour.

Banks Are Safe.
New York, Oct. 21.—A committee of the New York clearing house has issued a statement declaring that after having made an examination of the several banks of the association that have been under criticism that they have found the banks solvent and have decided to render them assistance if necessary.

BUSY DETECTIVES

Took Note of Violations of Sunday Law at Kansas City.

Kansas City, Oct. 21.—All the theaters of this city were open yesterday in violation of the Sunday closing order of Judge Wallace of the criminal court.

Scores of city detectives and deputy county marshals were busy all day securing evidence against the violators of the Sunday closing order, which will be presented Tuesday to the same judge who has already indicted all the theatrical managers here for keeping their playhouses open Sunday. Judge Wallace believes that this method of proceeding, if adopted every Sunday, will prove so inconvenient to traveling actors that the theaters will be compelled to close.

Practically all the grocers and other merchants except cigar dealers obeyed the closing order. Many cigar stores and pool halls refused to close.

$5 an Hour for Amazing Test.

Cincinnati, Oct. 21.—Dan O'Leary, the world-famous long-distance walker, finished his 1,000-mile walk in this city at 7 o'clock Sunday morning. He walked one mile during each hour for 1,000 consecutive hours, and although he is nearly sixty-five years old, he at no time during this test of his strength showed any signs of faltering. This is one of the most remarkable walking tests ever witnessed in America, and the medical world has been intensely interested as to the outcome. It is said that the International Tuberculosis association persuaded O'Leary to attempt the walk and that he is to receive $5,000 for accomplishing the task.

AERIAL CONTEST

Great Balloons Will Start on Test of Endurance at St. Louis.

THE LONG DISTANCE RACE

This Is the First Bout in Spectacular Series of International Contests Billed For Week.

America, Great Britain, Germany and France Will Battle For Supremacy of the Air.

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—After months of planning, weeks of preparation and days of manual labor, all arrangements have been completed for the second international aeronautic contest, which will be held here this week beginning at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Nine balloons have been entered, representing America, Germany, France and England.

The first international contest was held last year at Paris at which Lieutenant Frank P. Lahm of the United States cavalry, by a flight of 402 miles, won the James Gordon Bennett cup, the trophy of the contest. The cup is an object of art in massive silver, valued at $2,500, and was offered by Jas. Gordon Bennett to the aeronaut covering the longest distance in a single flight. If the cup is won three times in succession by an aeronaut, it then becomes the property of the aeronaut club of which he is a member. The winner of the cup in each international contest, by the terms of the donor will receive in addition a prize of $2,500 in cash, together with one-half of the entry fees and forfeits. The contestant finishing second will receive one-third and the contestant finishing third the balance of the entry fees and forfeits.

This second competition for the Bennett International aeronautic cup was organized by the Aero Club of America under the rules of the International Aeronautic Federation, and will be conducted under the auspices of the Aero Club of St. Louis.

Today the principal feature of the entire aeronautic meet will open the program, when the nine balloons will ascend for the international long-distance race for the Bennett cup.

Tuesday there will be a contest for aeroplanes or flying machines of the heavier than air type, with total cash prizes of $2,500.

Wednesday there will be a contest for air-ships and vehicles of the lighter than air type, with total prizes of $2,500.

Thursday the contest of flying machines for the Scientific American cup will be held.

Friday will be "free-for-all" day, in which any kind of air craft that will get above the ground may participate in the contest to win the Lahm cup, which has just been won by Aeronauts McCoy and Chandler in their long balloon flight from St. Louis to West Virginia.

Aeronautic interest centers chiefly on the international balloon race. According to announcement of the Aero club, the first balloon, the Pommern, will be sent up at 4 p. m., and the others will follow at not less than five minute intervals.

A test balloon sent up at sunset last evening was whirled away on a twenty-five mile wind in a direction just west of south. This is the first balloon in months which has taken this course, and the aeronauts are predicting that Mexico will be the goal if prevailing atmospheric conditions continue. The weather bureau, however, predicts variable winds—the most discouraging weather a balloon has to deal with.

Captain Charles DeF. Chandler and his aid, J. C. McCoy, who made the sensational flight last week in signal corps balloon No. 10, reached St. Louis Sunday and were warmly welcomed. The Lahm trophy of the Aero Club of America will be awarded to Captain Chandler as soon as the official measurement of the distance traveled by No. 10 is received from Washington. Captain Chandler will hold the cup until some other balloonist exceeds his record of 475 miles. The flight in the international contest will not be considered in connection with the Lahm competition.

Destructive Incendiary Blaze.

Colchester, Ill., Oct. 21.—Fire supposed to be of incendiary origin Saturday night destroyed $50,000 worth of property in the business section of this town. The flames were discovered in the rear of Carson's hardware building shortly after 11 o'clock. The fire spread rapidly and a hardware store, book store, undertaking establishment, furniture house, feed store and two dwellings were consumed before the fire was under control at 3 o'clock in the morning. This is the most extensive series of fires at Colchester in the past few months, all of incendiary origin.

Costly Prairie Fire.

Barnesville, Minn., Oct. 21.—A prairie fire is devastating the northeastern part of Wilkin county, Minnesota, and three farms have already been wiped out. The damage thus far is estimated at $50,000. The fire was started by a boy who was playing with matches.

Telephones and Fires.

The earliest application of the telephone in connection with a switchboard was made at Bridgeport, Conn., in June, 1878, where in the eagerness of various fire companies to arrive first at fires, the men of company No. 5, which was next to the telephone office, told the telephone operator to request his twenty-one patrons to give the information over the telephone of any fire and to report the fact at the engine house. This engine was not only the first at several fires, but in some mysterious manner was frequently on its way before the alarm struck.

This reached a climax on the occasion of a small fire in a dwelling, which the fire company attended with muffled bell, in response to a telephone message, and no fire alarm was pulled. On their return, the engine was driven by the house of a rival company with bell ringing, and when the men rushed out with inquiries they were told that the fire had been extinguished.

After this occurrence, the chief of the fire department gave orders that companies should not respond to a fire alarm received over a telephone, but the insurance agents of the city appealed to the city council, who ordered that all fire engine houses should be equipped with telephones.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Feast of Yule.

It was Pope Telesphorus, who died before the year 150 A. D., who instituted Christmas as a festival, though for some time it was irregularly held in December, April and May. But for centuries before there had been a feast of Yule among the northern nations, whose great enjoyment was in drinking the wassail bowl or cup. Nothing gave them so much delight as indulgence in "carousing ale," especially at the season of short days, when fighting was ended. It was likewise the custom at all their feasts "for the master of the house to fill a large bowl or pitcher, to drink out of it first himself and then give to him that sat next, and so it went around." This may have been the origin of that popular American custom known as "treating."

Flattered Him.

"You ought to have been more tactful. You should have flattered him."

"I did flatter him."

"Flattered him? Why, you told him he was half a fool!"

"Well, wasn't that flattering him?"

Jane—Oh, no, mum, not now, thank you. It worried me a good deal at first, mum, but I've got used to it.—London Telegraph.

DANGER IN DELAY

Kidney Diseases are too Dangerous for Nashville People to Neglect

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Nashville.

Mrs. J. T. Champion, 618 W. Fifth street, Nashville, Ind., says:

"After recovering from severe illness, my husband was afflicted with kidney trouble. He was subject to backache and a lameness across the hips. The kidney secretions caused him much annoyance from their frequent passages. Added to this was occasional headaches and dizzy spells. He began using Doan's Kidney Pills which he procured at F. B. Johnson & Company's drug store and the improvement in his condition was soon noticeable. They have removed the lameness from his back and corrected the urinary trouble. He does not have headaches and dizzy spells as formerly. We consider Doan's Kidney Pills a most reliable remedy."

BALLOON SEEN IN RUSH COUNTY.

BY OUR OWN WRITER.

PINHOOK, RUSH CO. TODAY.—Just after feedin' hour this mornin' Hank Peasley, one of our stablest citizens, seen a queer lookin' thing cavortin' aroun' in the air, and borrowin' Doc Hossup's fieldin' glass, which Doc picked up during the war, he took a good squint at the thing. Low and behold it was an air ship. After gettin' a good bead on it, he seen nobody was aboard the infernal thing. There was only one thing to do, capture it. He lost no time in gettin' his breech loadin' shot gun filled with nails and other truck and with one shot at the gas bag brought the affair to the ground. On inspection it was found not to be one of the Bennett tin cups, but the ship "Neptune" which Walt Wellman used to make a wild dash for the North Pole, but didn't git no further than the London drawing rooms and a pink tea farewell. The remains can be seen at the Bluff cemetery where they fell. It is a combination balloon, boat and sled,

TWO CHEERFUL LIARS.

A Queer Cherry Tree and a Back Action Cannon Ball.

He was on a visit to the Earl of Monteth and Alrth in his castle of Taha, on the loch of Monteth, and was about taking leave when he was asked by the earl whether he had seen the sailing cherry tree.

"No," said Finlayson. "What sort of a thing is it?"

"It is," replied the earl, "a tree that has grown out of a goose's mouth from

POLITICAL ARREST

William English Walling in Trouble in St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 21.—William English Walling of Indianapolis, Ind., his wife, and his sister-in-law, Miss Rose Stransky, were arrested in this city last night by a force of gendarmes, because of their association with several members of the Finnish Progression party. Kellogg Durland, another American, and a friend of Mr. Walling's, who has been in St. Petersburg gathering material for a series of lectures, was also taken into custody, but later he was released.

Mr. Walling is a wealthy Socialist. He is a grandson of the late William H. English, who was vice presidential candidate in 1880, when General Hancock ran for the American presidency. For several years past Mr. Walling has taken an active interest in the Russian struggle, and this is the third time he has visited Russia.

The Finns with whom the Wallings have been associated were also arrested. In this party there are three men and one woman. The woman is the wife of Prof. Malmberg of Helsingfors university. The Finns have been in St. Petersburg for several days. They have been under close police observation all the time. Saturday and Sunday the Finns, Mr. and Mrs. Walling and Miss Stransky dined together and last night the entire party was taken into custody. After much telephoning by the authorities places were finally found for the prisoners. The three Americans were separated. Mr. Walling was sent to the detention prison, his wife to the woman's prison and Miss Stransky, who is apparently regarded as the most important captive, to the new jail recently built for the famous third section, or the secret police. It was impossible to learn what the charge was against the Finns.

Mr. Walling had just returned to St. Petersburg from attending the Socialist congresses in Germany and France. He has also spent several months recently in Geneva, where he frequented the headquarters of the Russian revolutionists. He is intimate with many leading revolutionists and Liberals. Mr. Walling is accused by the police of furnishing financial aid to the revolution, though this charge is not the foundation for his arrest.

Mr. Walling is described as having been a quiet and reserved man until he was aroused on the subject of child labor. Then he forced himself to the front as an aggressive champion against children working in factories. His energies and his means were enlisted in this cause. At one time he was a state factory inspector in Illinois.

Mrs. Walling, who was Miss Anna Stransky, is a graduate of Leland Stanford, Jr., university, California. She has done considerable literary work. She is a Jewess, twenty-six years old, and was born in Russia. She has lived in the United States since her childhood. Her father is a business man in San Francisco.

Caught at "Dead Man's Crossing."

Cincinnati, Oct. 21.—A train on the Cincinnati, Indianapolis & Springfield division of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad Sunday afternoon added another chapter to "Dead Man's Crossing" at Harrison and State avenues, by crashing into a crowded streetcar, killing Mrs. J. W. Storey instantly and injuring three others, one of whom will probably die. The gateman had lowered the gate for a south-bound train and did not see the approaching north-bound flyer, which was going about thirty miles an hour at the time.

Violent Hurricane in Norway.

Trondhjem, Norway, Oct. 21.—A violent hurricane has been raging over the province of Finnmark since last Thursday. Many fishing boats are missing and up to the present time seven lives have been lost.

The Spanish Main.

What was known as the Spanish main is the circular bank of islands forming the northern and eastern boundaries of the Caribbean sea, beginning at Mosquito and including Jamaica, Santo Domingo, the Leeward islands and the Windward islands, with the coast of Venezuela, in South America. The word "main" has no affinity with the English word as in mainland, but comes from the Spanish word manea, shackles, given preference to the imaginary resemblance of the broken chain of islands to that (in early days) familiar article.

Could Elongate Himself.

John Brink prided himself on having the largest general store in the county. "If man wishes it and it is made, I have it," was the sign over his store and the motto which capped all his advertisements in the newspapers.

"William," said Mr. Brink one morning as he was giving instructions to a green clerk, "no one must ever leave this store without making a purchase. If a person doesn't know what he wants suggest something. And, remember, we have everything from carpet tacks to mausoleums."

William's first customer was a leisurely appearing chap who gazed about curiously, but had no definite object in view. "Just looking around," he explained.

"Wouldn't you like to take a look at our new line of postal cards?" suggested the eager clerk.

"No, not this time," answered the stranger; "I'm just a little short this morning."

"Ah," urged the new clerk, who was not familiar with the wonderful expansiveness of the language, "then perhaps you'd like to look at our line of new and handsome stretchers?"—Harper's Weekly.

HELD TO ANSWER

Samuel H. Wulfman Arrested In Connection With Huntingburg Bank Failure.

CONSPIRACY IS CHARGED

It Is Alleged That Cashier of Bank Turned Money Over to Wulfman to Operate Coal Mine.

The Money Was "Sunk" It Is Said, and the Bank Is In Hands of Receiver.

Jasper, Ind., Oct. 21.—Samuel H. Wulfman, formerly one of the trustees of the Southern Insane hospital and treasurer of the board, was arrested upon a charge of conspiracy with Charles Behrens, formerly cashier of the defunct People's State bank of Huntingburg, to defraud the bank out of $80,000. The indictment is in eleven counts. The People's State bank failed in August, 1906, and last January a receiver was appointed. The receiver's report shows that after realizing on all the assets there will still be lacking nearly $100,000 to pay the indebtedness. The indictment charges that Behrens turned this money over to Wulfman, who sunk it in a coal mine in Pike county. Wulfman gave bond for his appearance at the January term of the Dubois circuit court. Congressman Cox and Senator R. M. Milburn will defend him.

BRUNAUGH MISSING

Under Indictment for Asphalt Frauds, Can't Be Found.

Indianapolis, Oct. 21.—According to Sheriff Joseph Clay and the best information that could be had from the man's friends, Harry P. Brunaugh, indicted for grafting, has fled from the city and is a fugitive from justice. The search of the sheriff and his deputies for the asphalt repair contractor was fruitless.

Brunaugh returned to Indianapolis from Chicago Saturday, arriving here in the company of Floyd A. Woods. The information that he was in the city came to the attention of the grand jury, then in session, and haste was made to return an indictment against him, charging graft in the patching of improved streets.

Statements of various persons in a position to know the affairs of Brunaugh were conflicting. There was another report current—and it appeared to come from the best of authority—that Brunaugh stated that he came to Indianapolis only for the purpose of withdrawing his money from a bank and fleeing. According to information which reached the ears of Prosecuting Attorney Hooton, Brunaugh withdrew from the American National bank $1,200 which he had on deposit there. This added weight to the belief that he had fled to avoid arrest on the indictment he must have known would be brought against him.

There is a growing suspicion among those acquainted with the case that Brunaugh could not have been alone in falsifying the books in which were recorded the areas patched by the Western Construction company, for which he was the local manager, and those intimately acquainted with him declared that he was of the sort that would "sneak" on any others who might be implicated in case he were caught and confronted with the charges that were made against him.

The indictment returned against Brunaugh charged him with falsifying a public record, which under the law is a felony.

Plea Will Be Self-Defense.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 21.—After being out on $5,000 bond for several months, Joseph Fulkerson, a farmer of Washington township, this county, was arraigned in circuit court today before Judge Wilson and a special venire on the charge of murder in the first degree. With a shotgun Fulkerson killed Gorman Lentz, one of his neighbors, who was standing at the front door of the Fulkerson home remonstrating with Mrs. Fulkerson for talking loudly at night. The murder was the outgrowth of a bad feeling between the Fulkerson and Lentz families, and Fulkerson will plead self-defense.

Young Woman's Shocking Death.

Wabash, Ind., Oct. 21.—A car on the Wabash Valley interurban railway struck a buggy containing Ozro Mason, twenty-three years old, a merchant of Urbana, this county, and Katharine Freshour, aged nineteen, a telephone operator of this city, and cut the young woman to pieces and so injured Mason that he will die.

Woman Shot Herself.

Madison, Ind., Oct. 21.—Mrs. Mary Louisa Sage, wife of John A. Sage, and daughter of the late John R. Cravens, committed suicide in a fit of emotional insanity by shooting herself through the heart. She was forty-seven years old, wealthy and charitable, and leaves a husband, a son and a daughter.

Bereaved, Commits Suicide.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 21.—Sick and worried over the loss of several members of his family by death, William Solomon, aged fifty, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid.
